PROFILE

Peyton Healey is a business litigation attorney and partner at Hedrick Kring Bailey PLLC. Peyton's practice focuses on complex civil litigation and commercial transactional matters for startup entities and established companies. In a 2017 jury trial, Peyton was lead counsel for two businesses that resulted in a $98 million judgment, the 22nd largest verdict in the United States that year. Peyton has successfully litigated cases concerning trade secret misappropriation, fraud, breach of contract, negligence, and a broad range of intellectual property infringement and enforcement matters for established business and startups alike. Peyton has also represented general contractors, trades, and vendors in construction litigation on various types of commercial projects.

Peyton is certified by the National Venture Capital Association and Berkeley Law in venture finance, and he acts as an Outside General Counsel for startup and related ventures, including business accelerators and emerging technologies companies, and in particular companies focusing on drones (both hardware and as-a-service), cutting edge watersports, next-generation battery technologies, and wellness endeavors. Peyton has counseled startup ventures at all stages of their funding lifecycles, managed complex intellectual property acquisition and licensing efforts, and formed business entities and structures to meet client goals.
